*The Environmental Protection Agency has a voluntary program called EPA Safer Choice that certifies products as being chemically safer for both the environment and people.

“Many fragrance materials may be associated with sensitization and allergenic responses and lack toxicological data. [There is a] need for products that are certified to be fragrance-free...for individuals with fragrance allergies or sensitization concerns. [Therefore,] the EPA developed an option for a fragrance-free label that would allow purchasers to identify fragrance-free products and know that the claim has been verified by a trusted source” (EPA).

<https://www.epa.gov/saferchoice/safer-choice-criteria-fragrance-free-products>

“Note that the term ‘fragrance’ refers to a formulated product that contains multiple scent and other chemicals (e.g., carriers, stabilizers and preservatives), while ‘fragrance materials’ are solely the scent and masking components in the fragrance” (EPA).

“Unscented generally means that, while fragrance materials are not used to impart a scent, a product may contain chemicals that neutralize or mask the odors of other ingredients. Fragrance-free means that neither fragrance materials nor masking scents are used in the product” (EPA).
